IMAGINARY CREATURES

1. Fairy (0'49")

*They have fairy dust and fairy friends,
and hair and arms and legs and little shoes.*

*One week they wear the flats,
one week they wear the high heels.*

*They all eat at the fairy café,
they eat lollipops,*

ice cream, and

cupcakes –

all sweet treats.

They don't eat broccoli.

-Blythe & Ewan MacMullen, ages 5 & 8

2. Mermaid (0'59")

Half- human, half- fish.

They live in the ocean,

Or lakes.

They wear a bra under the water.

It's a seashell.

And every night they spread magic across the land,

And that night becomes a great night!

-Coen Linscheid, age 8

-Eleanor McFarland, age 5

3. Unicorn (0'12")

A unicorn has sparkly hair and goes NAY NAY!

*It has special powers
for making sparkle parties.*

-Jackson Fox, age 4

4. Imaginary Friend (1'12")

Some people can't see them, but others can.

My imaginary friend is named Fred.

He has tan-colored skin and he's very nice.

He has golden hair.

Fred can fly.

-Ewan MacMullen, age 8

5. Dragon (1'20")

Dragons can be good or bad.

Either people ride it,

or it is an evil dragon and it just destroys everything.

It goes hhhhhhhhhah!

And it breathes out fire.

I would be friends with a dragon,

if it was a nice one.

If you're friends with a dragon,

you're gonna have a great time!

-Avery & Jackson Fox, ages 7 & 4

-Adam & Coen Linscheid, ages 9 & 8

About the Work

Commissioned by California Choral Directors Association for the 2021 SATB All-State Honor Choir, Imaginary Creatures is a lighthearted set of miniatures—each movement presents a child’s description of the title creature. With 2020 and 2021 being such challenging years, I found myself with a greater need for joy and laughter in my own world and guessed that others might feel similarly. I have also always loved writing in miniature form (Three Quotes by Mark Twain, Gems of J.M. Barrie, My Mother’s Words, and TwainSong). There is something so satisfying about the compact nature of small writes. Beyond the delight of creating a whole world or telling a story in 12 to 90 seconds, they also appeal to my desire for variety (sometimes I get bored easily ☺).

After searching several books (both prose and poetry) and struggling to find the right kind of texts I was seeking, I thought of how many dear friends I have who with young children (or grandchildren.) Kids are both hilarious and richly imaginative, so why not ask my friends to interview their children about these creatures? I sent the request (along with a series of questions and compensation for their time) and in return, my friends sent me links to adorable videos of their children/grandchildren talking about fairies, mermaids, unicorns, imaginary friends, dragons, and werewolves. I transcribed the interviews, and began selecting the most imaginative and humorous tidbits to assemble as the texts in this work. You’ll notice werewolf did not make the cut. Not for lack of material, but rather I had so much material that I decided to save that idea for a standalone work about werewolves at some point down the road.

In performing the work, singers and conductor are invited to think creatively about presentation. It might be especially effective to have small children read the text before each movement to give the audience a clear understanding that these are the words of children. Almost every movement has something humorous, dramatic, tender or silly to express. Singers should seek to be storytellers with their facial expressions and personal engagement. Some light staging or movement might also be appropriate in certain movements. Clear enunciation of the text will help convey the humor, especially in moments like “they don’t eat broccoli” in Fairy, etc. So, express, articulate, emote, and invite the audience into the joy/terror/magic/whimsy of these imaginary creatures.
